

To whom it may concern

Mr. Michael Plasmeier, born on 14th April, 1991, completed an internship at DB Mobility Logistics AG from 31st May, 2010 until 20th August, 2010.

DB Mobility Logistics AG is a subsidiary of Deutsche Bahn Group. As Europe's largest transport and logistics company, Deutsche Bahn Group offers integrated national and international mobility and logistic solutions for private and business clients.

In the course of his internship Mr. Plasmeier worked in the project Touch&Travel. Touch&Travel is a mobile phone-based ticketing solution of Deutsche Bahn which is being tested in a trial phase. He was entrusted with the following responsibilities:

- Developing and building a GIS (geographical information) application platform which pulled together information from different Deutsche Bahn departments to make travel data visual and tactile for customers
- Researching the feasibility and brainstorming possibilities for the new smartphone version of Touch&Travel
- Creating the User Interface (UI) flow and graphical design prototypes for the new smartphone version of Touch&Travel
- Preparing business meetings between Deutsche Bahn and tech providers as well as potential partners around Near Field Communication (NFC).

Mr. Plasmeier always completed his work, and was familiar with all the processes and conditions of the enterprise. He was knowledgeable all the time, and worked in a goal-oriented manner in matters of day-to-day business.

Thanks to his excellent comprehension, Mr. Plasmeier managed new as well as extremely complex tasks very efficiently. Particularly notable is his capacity for good judgment, which allowed him to make independent, measured, and accurate decisions even in difficult situations.

Mr. Plasmeier managed his work with exemplary commitment and personal dedication during his entire engagement at our company. Even in stressful situations and when under extraordinary pressure, he remained level-headed, acted purposefully, and produced very high quality results. He completed his tasks with a sense of responsibility, discretion and great dedication.

We valued him as a responsible, dutiful and honest colleague continually. Even for the most difficult problems, he found and produced effective solutions that lead to excellent work results. We were every time completely satisfied with his results and performance. Mr. Plasmeier got along very well with all he came into contact with, and was always friendly, open and obliging.

His attitude towards superiors, colleagues and those outside the company was exemplary at all times. Because of the fixed-term contract the employment ends with termination of the appointed time period. Unfortunately, because of the present economic situation that is also affecting our company, we cannot offer Mr. Plasmeier any further prospects.

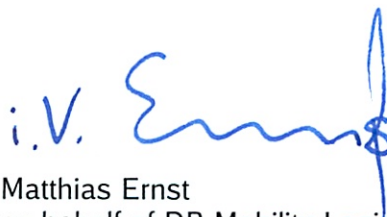

We regret his departure immensely and we are losing a valuable colleague. We are grateful for his outstanding efforts and wish him all the best and continued success for his professional as well as personal future.
